FOREWORD

In accordance with the provisions of the Act respecting electoral representation (R.S.Q., c. R-24.1), the Commission de la représentation submits its report indicating the boundaries of Québec's electoral divisions.

The introduction to this report recalls the steps in the Commission's work since the election of April 13, 1981. It also includes a summary of the Commission's recommendations concerning changes to be made to electoral divisions' boundaries as well as a statement of the reasons which have led the Commission to determine exceptions.

Following the introduction are explanatory notes, a list of conventional abbreviations as well as three technical chapters entitled: Tables; Description of Electoral Divisions - April 1985; Appendices.

INTRODUCTION

In accordance with the provisions of section 25 of the Act respecting electoral representation, the Commission de la représentation shall submit a report proposing boundaries for Québec's electoral divisions to the President or Secretary General of the National Assembly within twelve months following the date of a general election. This report should have been submitted no later than April 13, 1982. However, on December 19, 1981, the National Assembly suspended work underway until January 1, 1983 and the report's submission was postponed until April 13, 1983 (An Act amending the Act respecting electoral representation, 1981, c. 28).

On June 22, 1983, the National Assembly entrusted the Commission with evaluating the present polling method and the study of various formulas for changing the method of polling. At the same time, it set April 13, 1985 as the deadline for consulting members of Parliament, citizens and organizations concerning the boundaries of electoral divisions (An Act amending the Act respecting electoral representation, 1983, c. 36). Considering the new deadline, the National Assembly's permanent commission studied, on January 31, 1985, the Proposal for Establishing the Boundaries of the Electoral Divisions of April 13, 1983. Subsequently, the Commission de la représentation held public hearings in five regions of Québec, namely, in Rivière-du-Loup, Hull, Québec City, Montréal and Windsor. After having studied the comments is was able to gather concerning its proposal, the Commission made the changes it felt were appropriate.

The Commission had planned to hold two other public hearings. The one for Matane was cancelled due to a lack of participants and Lebel-sur-Quévillon's following an agreement with the bodies wishing to express their views. Still, the Commission's decision concerning Lebel-sur-Quévillon corresponds to the requests of these bodies.

This report is based on the figures used for the 1981 general election although the 1984 census changed the number of electors. A number of reasons explained in detail on January 21, 1985 before the members of the National Assembly's permanent commission led the Commission to believe that the census data should not be considered in drawing up the final decision. Nevertheless, the Commission considered it useful to attach to the text, for purposes of comparison, a table showing the number of voters per electoral division in 1981 and 1984 (cf. p. 12).

In accordance with its proposal of April 13, 1983 and taking mathematical standards into account (minimum of 27 000, average of 36 000 and maximum of 45 000 electors), the Commission considers it unnecessary to make major changes to the present map.

It recommends:

- 1- that the current number of 122 electoral divisions be maintained;

2- that adjustments be made to 33 electoral divisions of which

14 do not involve any electors

11 involve less than 500 electors

and

8 involve more than 500 electors;

3- that four electoral divisions be regarded as exceptions, namely Lévis, Laprairie, Papineau and Richmond.

In addition to the reasons justifying the changes proposed, the Commission used its April 13, 1983 report to state a number of demographic and sociological considerations. Here, it limits itself to providing explanations concerning electoral divisions which are exceptions.

ELECTORAL DIVISIONS CONSTITUTING EXCEPTIONS

1981 Electoral population

		Page
Lévis	48 371 electors	45
Laprairie	45 749 electors	43
Papineau	26 057 electors	54
Richmond	24 823 electors	56

Reasons for exceptions:

Lévis: (48 371 electors)

This electoral division's current boundaries correspond to a local organizational tradition while respecting a feeling of belonging, which has often been voiced, as well as a number of geographic and sociological criteria.

Demographic considerations would have justified changing the situation. However, at present, the Commission does not consider it appropriate to partially change the boundaries or to create a new electoral division notably due to the unavoidable repercussions of redistributing the excess voters in the electoral division of Lévis into neighbouring divisions.

This exception represents a difference of 7.5% compared with the maximum of 45 000 electors.

Laprairie: (45 749 electors)

By maintaining the present boundaries, the Commission avoids modifying this electoral division which already underwent changes during the last electoral map reform. The excess number of electors is only 749, a difference of 1.7% compared with the maximum of 45 000 electors.

Papineau: (26 057 electors)

The Commission agreed to respond to the wishes of the municipality of Notre-Dame-du-Laus which, since 1980, has asked to be transferred into the neighbouring electoral division of Labelle.

The division lacks 943 electors to reach the minimum of 27 000 electors. A difference of -3.5% exists compared with this level.

Richmond: (24 823 electors)

The division of Richmond is surrounded by average cities each having a zone of influence. Since it could not enlarge this electoral division without encroaching on these zones of influence and considering the representations made by members of Parliament, citizens and organizations concerned in favour of the city and township of Windsor belonging to the electoral division of Johnson, the Commission decided to maintain the township and the city of Windsor in the electoral division of Johnson. By doing this, the Commission adds another exception to the three considered in April 1983.

Despite the small number of voters in the electoral division of Richmond, the Commission acceded to the request of the municipality of the township of Chester-Est (193 voters) to be transferred from the electoral division of Richmond to that of Arthabaska where Victoriaville, the centre of attraction for this municipality, is located.

Following this transfer, the electoral population of the division of Richmond is 2 177 below the minimum level of 27 000 electors. This figure represents a difference of -8.1% compared with the minimum level.

THE 122 ELECTORAL DIVISIONS

EXPLANATORY NOTES

Before presenting the 122 electoral divisions, it is useful to give the reader some explanatory notes.

The list of electoral divisions is preceded by five tables, of which the first three deal with general data, with the divisions modified and with those constituting exceptions. The two remaining tables indicate the number of electors per electoral division in alphabetical and increasing numerical order. The table in alphabetical order includes the figures for the general election of April 13, 1981 and those for the census of 1984.

Enumeration of electoral divisions is done in alphabetical order. Under the name of each division appears the electoral population it contains within its new boundaries, according to the 1981 figures.

The municipalities and their boundaries are those existing on March 19, 1985.

By the words 'autoroute', 'avenue', 'boulevard', 'chemin', 'côte', 'rue', 'voie ferrée', 'canal', 'lac', 'fleuve' and 'river', we mean their median line, unless indicated otherwise.

Following the text, the reader will find a series of 23 maps showing, for each of the electoral divisions, the details of territorial changes recommended by the Commission de la représentation.

A map of Québec indicating the boundaries of the new electoral divisions and highlighting changes to the present map has been attached to this report.
